Plucky Drummers

Over a week ago Chas. M. Friedburg, Sol Davidson and Maurice Berger, drummers, were snowed in at Biggs for four days. They finally started in a four-in-hand to go over the Summit in six feet of snow and a blinding snow storm. They got stuck in a drift, and were four hours lagging out. In going a distance of two miles, fifteen hours were whiled away, and not very pleasantly either.

The cold was intense and they tell a thrilling story of their experience. Davidson had his feet frozen, and Friedburg his fingers, but Berger who is an old Nevada traveler, and accustomed to the cold, suffered only from the pangs of hunger. When they reached Carson they were nearly famished, and have been dosing with quinine (and good grub) at the Arlington for several days.

DEATH OF CASH WILEY.

Discovered Dead in His Bed Yesterday Morning.

C. V. Wiley, who has been running the Dairy Restaurant for the last month, was found dead in his bed in the St. Charles hotel yesterday morning, by Chas. Bain the porter.

Bain had gone up to Wiley's room once or twice on Thursday but was unable to rouse him, and supposing him to be on the night shift in the restaurant, concluded that he wanted to rest.

Yesterday morning, however, he went up to his room again, and not being able to awaken him, became alarmed and looked through the transom, when he discovered the man dead.

The door was burst open, and an ounce bottle half filled with morphine, was found under the pillow; his partly smoked pipe was also found by his side on the bed.

His fingers were blue, and there were blue blotches on his body which was badly swollen, indicating that he had been dead for over thirty hours.

Last evening's paper furnishes these additional particulars:

On Saturday evening Mrs. Wiley found a card lying on her desk, which read as follows:

March, 2nd, 2 P. M.

Lyle and Lizzie—good bye. I am out of the way. Bury me as I am dressed, and as cheap as you can.

CASH V. WILEY.

Mrs. Wiley then went into the back room of the restaurant and found him lying on the bed, a bottle of morphine, half empty, lying close by. She woke him up and asked "what he meant." He replied, "Oh nothing!" As the wife saw him again on Monday, in fact, he died on Monday evening, it is evident he did not take enough morphine to kill him at that time.

Deceased was a sporting man by profession, was peaceable and quiet, but much given to despondency. He leaves a wife, who will run the restaurant, and a bright little girl of about eight years.

The Coroner's jury returned a verdict in accordance with the above facts.

EXPERT TESTIMONY.

Pieces of the Will Under a Microscope.

In the Stevenson will case, Charles Friend brought a microscope into the District Courtroom yesterday, with which he and Dr. Mullen had examined paper cut from the will. Friend could not swear as to whether the paper fibres on the mutilage came from the other page of the will or not. Dr. Mullen then cut a piece from the page directly opposite the place from which the piece under examination was cut. He testified that it was perfectly smooth, and the adhering fibres could not have come from that side. He also testified that in a conversation some time ago she told him she had already fixed things so the boys would get nothing. Mrs. Stevenson denied ever having had any conversation with Mullen regarding the boys.

Unimportant testimony regarding the Governor's unswerving will was also introduced.

The witness from San Francisco failed to arrive, but his testimony will be admitted when he reaches Carson, which will probably be this morning.

The case will be argued next Wednesday.

Death at the Orphan's Home.

Wednesday, Louis Muran, of the Orphan's Home, aged 12 years died, and was buried yesterday afternoon. He was followed to the grave by his little school mates, the boys walking and the girls riding, who, with the carriages constituted a long funeral procession. He was well liked by all the inmates of the Home, and all regret his taking away.

Fred Brault pleaded not guilty before Judge Rising yesterday. He was bound over in the sum of $1,000, and the case set for Thursday evening.
